

Final Project write up

I created a fan page for ZIMA BLUE, an episode of “Love, Death, and Robot” which have deep philosophical reflections on the meanings of life.

In the intro page, I set it as a wallpaper of galaxy, except that the middle part has a little blue square, which, if you hover on it, will deepen to a darker blue. It is a link to the home page of my project. I made this intro page because it is exactly how Zima is famous for his art pieces — using blue to disrupt a seemingly consistent picture.

In the home page, there are 3 logos, each one of them has a hover feature so you know it is clickable. The first one, the robot logo, is a hyperlink to the netflix page on the actual episode. The second one, a galaxy, leads you to the gallery page, where Zima’s art pieces are displayed. And the last one, a star logo, would direct to a story page where the origin of Zima is told.

On the gallery page, each picture is inspectable, when you hover, shadows would appear to better support inspection. Also, for both the gallery page and the story page, I added a back button on the top left hand corner fo direct back to the home page.
